Fauntroy on CIA Tutoring

The Post story about the CIA's tutoring program at Ballou High School, which appeared on page B-2 of the Metro section May 27, completely misrepresents my position on the issue.

My statements were taken out of context and lead to the false conclusion that I am opposed to the tutoring program. I support the concept of a CIA tutorial program in the nation's high schools. It seems to me that the technical knowledge and expertise contained within the agency can be a very useful educational tool for our high school students. I also consider it important that more minority persons become employed by the agency.
